They believe that they are our superiors in courage, in devotion to country, in all the virtues that appeal to men not too proud to fight. In this lies the explanation of the humiliating occurrences that have compelled the War army in Mexico or on the border, to strip our coast defences of men, and in "the flight itself," although we may finally to mobilize the National Guards of all the States.

The source of this Mexican misconception is obvious. It is universally recognized. The incomprehensible conduct of Woodrow Wilson has deceived the population of Mexico and made possible the perpetuation involve us in a war from which the people of the United States shrink in disgust, a war that intelligent statecraft in the past would have made Impossible

An informed and firm policy, rooted in good sense, would have kept our arms out of Mexico. That policy Woodrow Wilson because of his infirmities has been incapable of providing, and this morning he gives notice to the United States that his blunders have brought a situation requiring their correction in blood.

Because my fellow islanders, the Portor Ricans, are not so much devoid of reason as to follow the uncertain fortunes of a political party which as soon as it got hold of the three branches of the United States Government proceeded to ruin their main industry with the menace of free sugar, and, furthermore, when it was called upon to "make good" its promises advanced in the lean fland contented itself with saying that "national party divisions ended at the water's edge" and with enacting a bill which leaves Porto Rico under the control of the War Department.

The truth of the matter, Señor Editor, is that there is not such a Democratic party in Porto Rico to-day, and never will be, for the reason that my comparitots "know a bad thing when they see it" (they also know a good one, as in the case of the United States rule), and by this time they have taken in the full measure of the so-called "Jef
